I had the privilege of recently attending the Five Faces of Parenting training, and like anything new was very keen to put it into practice, which I did that night for a Dads Support Group. The response was amazing along with the communication and idea sharing that went with the scenarios. The beauty of this program is that it can be anything you want it to be, unlike some other programs that are prescriptive. I believe the five faces of parenting will cover all socio economic groups, meet parents' needs on an individual level but above all will provide all participants with an experience that is truly worthwhile.
